

IIDS Seminar Series on “Phenomenology: An Interdisciplinary Dialogue”
Seminar III: Prayer, Passion and the Phenomenology of Religion

(Project Sponsored by RGC, Hong Kong, Project No. UGC/IIDS15/H01/16)

By

Professor Felix Ó Murchadha,

Professor Felix Ó Murchadha is the Head of School of Humanities in National University of Ireland, Galway. Professor Felix Ó Murchadha’s research area including phenomenology of including Martin Heidegger, Emmanuel Levinas, Maurice Merleau-Ponty, and Klaus Held. Professor Felix Ó Murchadha is interested in phenomenology of religion, and is the author of books including The Time of Revolution: Kairos and Chronos in Heidegger (2012) and A Phenomenology of Christian Life: Glory and Night (2013).

Summary of Presentation

This is part of the project entitled “Prayer, Passion and the Phenomenology of religion”. The first part of presentation is a brief outline of phenomenology of religion, and the second part of the presentation focus on the topic in prayer in Christianity.

Date: 11 Oct 2017

Time: 14:00 – 17:00

Venue: Research Building Low Block 303, Hong Kong Shue Yan University, Bremar Hill, North Point, Hong Kong (Tin Hau MTR exit A1 minibus station > 49 M minibus, or Hung Hom MTR terminal Exit A > 108 bus)

Language: English

All are welcome.

Registration via email to project P.I. Dr. Fu Wai (wfu@hksyu.edu) is preferred, walk-in participation is also welcome.